

A Checklist of Derbyshire Lichens	Steve Price	2
Lichen Recorder's Report 2009	Steve Price	37
The Occurrence and Behaviour of Wood Mouse Apodemus sylvaticus in a Suburban Garden in Sheffield	Lee and Aileen Thickett	42
Sorby Fungus Group Recorders' Report 2009	Steve Clements	49

Sorby Record is copyright © Sorby Natural History Society. Papers and information may be freely quoted or used on condition that the author and the source Sorby Record, Sheffield are acknowledged. We are unable to provide offprints but authors may make multiple copies of their own papers for educational purposes.

Front cover. This nitrogen loving lichen, the Leafy Xanthoria (Xanthoria parietina), has arguably become the most abundant lichen in the area.
photo credit :Steve Price

Above. This delicate rare lichen, the Desperate-Dan (Anaptychia ciliaris subsp. ciliaris), has survived two centuries of industrial pollution hidden in a Peak District valley.
photo credit: Steve Price